South Carolina Tobacco Year in Review

The state's tobacco markets opened on August 8. And, I'm proud to say that the markets closed on October 18, 2000, with a total of 71,985,414 pounds sold at a value of $126,948,894.

For the most part, tobacco growers had excellent weather conditions during the 2000 growing season---a welcome relief after drought conditions in 1999. A relatively ideal growing season in most areas led to the better quality and premium prices that the industry so needed. A great majority of grade bid averages were up from last year. The volume of tobacco placed under loan decreased dramatically; however, both total volume and value were down from 1999 due to the 18% decrease in the effective quota.

Because the industry is changing, growers are having to make some serious business decisions. They are making decisions about contracting, converting tobacco barns, and baling tobacco. Growers must also decide how to provide the quality necessary to compete with foreign countries. Foreign tobacco is not fire-cured, an enticement to manufacturers to buy their tobacco from overseas.

The number of sets of buyers and graders declined again this season from 37 to 31---a sign that with the advent of contracting, there will be less need for buying at auction in the future. Many of the state's tobacco growers are now contracting with manufacturers. Approximately 82% of the volume sold this past season (59 million of the almost 72 million pounds total) was marketed in bales as opposed to sheets, according to the Flue-Cured Stabilization Corporation. About 30% (or 1,200 of the 4,000) tobacco barns in the state have been retrofitted to reduce nitrosamines. The bottom line is that the tobacco industry is changing rapidly from the traditional marketing system that has been around for hundreds of years.

Today, tobacco growers are not only competing with other countries for tobacco markets, but they are beginning to be forced to compete with each other for quality. Since domestic consumption is decreasing, there is less demand, so manufacturers will be buying from those who have the best product---the best quality. They will buy from those who produce what they want and how they want it.

If the members of the tobacco family are willing to change, then it's likely that they will continue to be successful in the business of tobacco. If they don't change, then they could be out of business whether they want to be or not. It's just that simple---and just that complicated.

Tobacco manufacturers have the upper hand, but they are also paying the piper with the tobacco settlements. The Phase II Tobacco Settlement is designed to compensate tobacco growers over a 12-year period for the loss of income and equity. Year 1 payment for SC was based on crop year 1998, and almost $25 million was certified to be divided equally between 17,000 growers and quota owners in 45 counties across the state. As of November, 2000, 1,242 growers and 10,910 quota owners were cleared for payment for Year 2. The SC Phase II Tobacco Settlement Administration web site can be accessed at <http://scphase2.wcsr.com> to find dates, documents, forms, and other information relating to the settlement. Growers and quota owners can also check on the status of submitted applications, calculate estimates of payments, and view the amounts paid to date for any county in South Carolina.

The impact of events in the past few years has not only affected growers and quota holders, but also banks and other lending institutions, warehouses, supply companies, and many local businesses in tobacco producing areas. Some are hoping for a better future, while others are calling it quits. It's a trying time for everyone in this business. A small portion of the Phase I Tobacco Settlement Funds is designated for assisting the economies in these tobacco-producing counties. As of early January, 2001, over $165 million had been deposited into the state's General Fund from the tobacco companies for the Phase I settlement. Most of those funds are designated for health care and anti-tobacco use education.

While the sky seems hopelessly gloomy, there is a tiny ray of light. The 2001 season marks the first season in years that there will be an increase in the quota---1% or 548.9 million pounds. A small increase is much better than a decrease---of any size.

As we enter 2001, growers must decide what is best for their individual operations. At the same time, the members of the tobacco industry must press on with an attitude---an attitude to move forward with understanding---working together for a better future---not just for South Carolina tobacco, but for the entire American market.

Commissioner of Agriculture
